From the President’s Desk...

Karen Smitherman | Procurement Manager for Helen Ross McNabb Center

Fall Conference
Fall Conference is scheduled for October 17th and 18th and will be held in Pigeon Forge. Fall Conference is not to be missed! The Social Event will be held on Wednesday beginning at 5:30 p.m. and educational sessions will be held on Thursday and Friday. Registration is open on the website. Please take a moment to review the schedule and register for the day(s) that you plan to attend. We must provide final numbers to the Marriott Courtyard soon and want to make sure you are included!

Personal Certification
Several ETPA members achieved their professional certification this year – Congratulations!!! These certifications are a lot of work, but also bring great reward, knowledge, and possible advancement in our careers. NIGP has developed Pathways that will allow additional certifications for different areas of expertise within our profession. More to come on Pathways at Fall Conference!

Bylaws Amendment
There is a proposed Bylaws Amendment included in this newsletter. I would like to open the membership to additional entities as allowable by NIGP’s bylaws. Also, included in the Amendment is changing the term of the President and Vice-President to two years to allow for continuity on the Board as these two offices and the Treasurer will not rotate off at the same time. Please review the proposed Amendment so that you can vote on it at our quarterly meeting in October.

2020
Please let us know if there are sessions that you have attended or articles that you have read that sparked your interest or you would like more information about. Our Professional Development team will begin working on the meetings and educational sessions for 2020 very soon. We want to make sure that we are meeting the needs of the membership and addressing the topics that we all need.

Global Best Practice: Audits

Standard: There are three primary audit types: compliance, financial, and performance. Preparation for an audit through regularly conducted self-assessments ensures that procurement professionals can readily provide up-to-date documents and data that may be requested by an auditor. Participating in an audit helps an agency’s procurement staff maintain a professional approach that promotes effective stewardship of public funds and best value for the constituents served by the agency.

Key points:

- The foundation for audit preparedness and effective self-assessment programs lies in the procurement professional’s knowledge of and adherence to laws, regulations, policies, procedures, and processes. Application of this foundation ensures economical, efficient, effective, and compliant daily operations.
- Self-assessments can prepare Procurement for audits by the agency’s internal audit department, an external accounting firm, or an independent expert.
- Audits can be triggered by major changes to the agency that impact procurement operations.
- Participation in an audit will differ depending on the type of audit and whether the audit is conducted by an internal audit department, an external accounting firm, state or federal auditor, or an independent expert.
- Effective participation in an audit is critical.
- Once the auditor has shared findings and recommendations, Procurement should dedicate time and staff to implementing any needed changes.

Take Away: Procurement plays a critical role in the annual audit of an entity. Procurement must be prepared with proper documentation, controls and knowledge to make the audit process go as smoothly as possible. Further, at times the procurement function itself may be the focus of an internal audit. Again, Procurement must have the proper documentation, controls and knowledge to ensure that this audit is favorable to the procurement function. In either type of audit, if the report presents inaccurate or misleading information about procurement, the Procurement professional must be ready with the facts to clarify the situation.
